Primary Postponed Till June 8th LAW DEMANDS IT.

Oklahoma City, April 20.—Convinced that it is impossible for a legal primary to be called for May 23, under the Oklahoma primary law, because of the inability to give the required 30 days notice, the Democratic state executive committee, yesterday decided to postpone the date of the state primaries until June 8.

The unanimous sentiment of the members of the committee was that the primary should be held on May 23, if there was any way in which such a primary election could be legally held under the recent decision of Judge Burford, knocking out the supreme election board as created by an ordinance of the constitutional convention.

The decision of Judge Burford declares that under the enabling act the election must in all matters conform as near as possible to the election laws of the territory of Oklahoma.

Under the election ordinance as adopted by the constitutional convention, there would still have been ample time to publish the notice of the primary and it was under this law that the state committee at Tulsa contemplated calling the primary. Since the provision establishing the supreme election board has been invalid, and it is agreed that the election laws of Oklahoma must apply, it has been found necessary to secure more time in order that the law may be complied with.

Another feature of the Oklahoma law that influenced the decision for postponing the primary is the one requiring that all persons who vote in the primary in cities of the first class, shall have registered one month preceding the primary election.

Under this provision, were the election held May 23, many of the Democrats of the Indian Territory cities would be deprived of any voice in the choice of their party candidate.

LAST DAY OF CONSTITUTION MAKER'S DELIBERATIONS

Guthrie, Okla., April 19.—Altogether the delegates today signed seven copies of constitution, including the engrossed parchment and six typewritten copies. This did not include the county boundary section, which will be signed by President Murray and Secretary Young only, following the completion of its transcribing. The parchment for this was shipped from New York yesterday.

The convention adjourned at 5 o'clock this afternoon as it will be impossible to get the entire election ordinance from the printer in time to complete the work tonight, and final adjournment will be taken tomorrow morning.

The final vote on the constitution, as interlined, changed and added to during the last week, was 85 ayes, no nays, and 27 absent. Delegate Cloud, of Wellston, the only republican present, voted for the constitution on final passage. Thus it received every vote cast. The signing was completed at 4:16 o'clock, when Secretary Charles Filson, of Oklahoma, attached the Oklahoma seal.

ADA SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CLASS PROGRAM

The Grade Exercises held yesterday by the Ada public schools were evidently enjoyed and appreciated to a very great extent, judging from the large attendance at the exercises when the program was repeated at night at the old M. E. Church building.

As advertised the program was given in the afternoon and again at night, and at each time large crowds were in attendance, many people being turned away for lack of room. There was some talk of repeating the program again tonight, but this was later abandoned.

Each room in the city schools furnished some exercise, and included 175 participants in all. The program was nicely gotten up and each number was much enjoyed. Following is the program:

Duet—Piff Paff Engleman
Alma Ingram and Ula Clare Sims.
At the Banquet Warren
Glen Harrell.
Concert Reading—"In the morning." Thirty-five children.
Song—Dolly, stop weeping (1st grade) Twelve girls.
Rose March—Sixteen children.
The Spelling Class—Thirteen children.
Nocturne—Brun Heller
Bonnie Horton.
Ruggles Dinner Party.
Animated Scale.
Recitation Lillian Hodge
Dialogue—The Cabbage Hill School. Twenty-six children.
Joyful Peasant—Schumann
Rebecca Tolbert.
Duet—Reuben and Rachel Song—Bobby Shaftoe.
Topsy Turvy Drill—Twelve children.
Farce—The Mixt Smiths.
Monolog in four parts—Elixir of Youth
Lucile Hall.
The Natural Spell—Eight Teachers.
Charge of the Light Brigade—Twelve Girls

There was a total of $25.60 raised at these exercises, which goes to help defray the expenses of the commencement week. There will be no change in the rest of the meetings.

Tomorrow morning at the new M. E. church at 11:00 o'clock, Dr. Bradford of Oklahoma City will deliver the commencement sermon. Dr. Bradford is chancellor of the Epworth University, and has the reputation of being one of the best speakers in the country.

Monday night at the new Methodist church occurs the class program, exercises given by the graduating class, and consisted of orations, music, etc.

There are seven graduates this year, the class roll being, H. Presnal Sugg, James T. George, Ula Clare Sims, Philip A. Thompson, Gladys Tarbett, Gilbert E. Reed and Raymond O. Barton. Following is the Monday night program in full:

"On Blooming Meadows" Rive King

ROY HOFFMAN

FURMAN AT ARDMORE.

Judge Furman spoke in Ardmore Thursday night. From the Ardmore press we observe he was given a rousing reception, and that his discourse was "masterful, forceful and logical." Here is a notable portion of his utterances as given in the press: "He said he had no press agent to work up enthusiasm for him and desired to be chosen to represent them in the U. S. senate solely upon his merits alone. He defined the duties of good citizens in the formation of laws and said that a government was no better than its citizens—he said that when a man was elected to office by the sheer force of money that the office belonged to him and he could and would use it to further his own selfish ends."

THE disgruntled parishioners of a tenacious pastor up in Pennsylvania put some dynamite under the parsonage in the effort to jar him loose. This is the most heroic remedy on record for a holding-on preacher.

A Scholar, Statesman and Gentleman. BY DR. FRANCIS B. FITE.

Robert L. Owen of Muskogee, Indian Territory, is a Virginian by birth, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and partly of Cherokee blood. Mr. Owen is a man who does things. He has recovered nearly twenty million dollars in values for his clients in the last sixteen years, recovering about three million dollars for the Choctaws and Chickasaws, and near six million dollars for the eastern and western Cherokees.

He took the degree of Master of Arts at Washington and Lee University under General Lee, taking a six-year course in three years; the gold medal as best debater, and the president's scholarship as the most diligent student, and delivered the valedictory in 1877.

He belongs to the old settlers of Indian Territory, his mother having been born at Webbers Falls, Indian Territory, in 1831, and he has lived in Indian Territory nearly 30 years.

He has served the Democracy as editor; as organizer; as member of the congressional campaign committee and of the Democratic national committee, and was vice-chairman of the Democratic campaign committee in 1906.

As a lawyer he has won distinction in the supreme court of the United States. He is thoroughly familiar with regard to the rights of all classes of people of Indian Territory, and no man in Indian Territory is more thoroughly equipped to serve the new state in Washington, where he has spent sixteen winters in succession, practicing before the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government, where he has won a national reputation of which Oklahoma may well be proud. His argument in the Eastern Cherokee case of four hours before the court of claims was pronounced by Chief Justice Chas. C. Nott, for forty years a justice of that court, the finest argument, in his opinion, ever delivered in that court. Mr. Owen has handled cattle on a large scale for many years, and has now one of the finest herds of Hereford cattle in the state; he has handled farming operations on a large scale, and for some years has been engaged in the development of English blue grass for cattle pasture, having the largest field of blue grass in Oklahoma. Mr. Owen is an Episcopalian, a life member of the Elks, a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of the Shrine. There is no man in the state who is more charitable; more affable; more desirous of being absolutely just and kind to other men. He has been at all times a champion of the rights of the common people, and was an earnest advocate in establishing the Initiative and Referendum, and has been the most conspicuous advocate in demanding the removal of restrictions on the sale and lease of lands in Indian Territory. Mr. Owen has offered his service to the state at the instance and demand of friends throughout the state who believe that he is qualified in a very extraordinary manner to serve the state in Washington, and that he would do the state the greatest credit in the senate of the United States. If chosen by the state he would enter the senate thoroughly equipped for immediate service, and would not have to spend two years or more in learning how to accomplish things there. While Mr. Owen is a plain, practical business man, at the same time he is regarded as one of the most convincing speakers in the state. A man who does not indulge in oratory, but who has strong convictions and demonstrates the reason for his opinions with vigor and with great force. Indian Territory is indebted to him for much legislation of great value. The establishment of the national banking system; the establishment of the United States court in Indian Territory; full citizenship to all Indians, and many other services of importance. The fact that he is connected with the Indians of Indian Territory by blood will strengthen the Democratic party in nominating him for the senate, because nearly the whole of the lands of Indian Territory are owned by people of Indian blood or Indian sympathy. Maps of the new state of Oklahoma, showing the correct county boundary lines, may be had at The News office. Come in and see these maps. 23-1f

PRESCRIPTION TO CLEAN THE BLOOD. Anyone can easily mix the following prescription at home, which is said to be splendid because of its peculiarly beneficial action upon the kidneys, which are made to properly filter and strain from the blood the impurities, acids and poisons. Get the ingredients from any good pharmacy and mix them by shaking well in a bottle: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. Drink plenty of good water too. Those whose veins are filled with sour acids and Rheumatic poison, who require a good blood cleanser and system tonic, or if the kidneys are weak and clogged up, should prepare this mixture and take as directed for a few days and note results.

OVERDRAFTS
It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrafted is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

A squarely built house having four rooms downstairs and four bedrooms upstairs is shown in this plan. Generally speaking, there is economy in building a square house or a house that is nearly square on the ground. It is a sort of a square deal for the owner, because the same amount of wall encloses more square feet of floor surface and more cubic feet of solid and the youngsters will grow to appreciate it in time.

There is another combination stairway in this house, and that is the one that leads to the cellar. The entrance way from the kitchen and from outdoors meet on a common landing about the level of the ground. It is a good convenience in the summer, and in the fall when using the cellar for storage for garden truck, and it is just as

A HELPFUL TANGLE

BY EMMETT C. HALL

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Ned Hazard stood upon the little dock and surveyed the trim motor boat that floated jauntily upon the clear water of the lake. There was in his face an amusing mixture of admiration, proprietary pride and hesitancy. He was quite as familiar with the operation of a launch as with animals of the early glacial period, and yet he had asked Virginia Moore to take a sail with him that very afternoon.

Of course it would have been a simple matter to have secured a man from the boat club, but Ned Hazard was accustomed to do things himself, and the idea of two dreamy hours alone with Virginia was too enticing to be put aside. And, any way, had not the agent fully explained the working of the motor to him?

Hazard was the happy product of two distinct sections and environments. A college man, born in the east, he had gone with the first rush to Alaska, and had struck it rich. The three, long silent years under the Northern Lights had left their impress, however. They had given a quiet self-reliance, but also a remarkable diffidence with women, and it was most marked in the company of Virginia. When he had gone away, he had left her a mischievous, laughing school girl, and when he returned he had found a beautiful young woman, and had promptly fallen entirely and completely in love.

It had not been for the three silent years, he would no doubt have shed his suit with all the ardor which he had put into football in his college days, and quite as likely Virginia would have gently turned him down. As it was, he loved her with a blind devotion, the intensity of which caused him to depreciate himself in his own mind, which so clouded his vision that he could not even that Virginia evinced a most decided preference for his company, or that her hand trembled and her eyes shined when they met.

After his inspection of the launch, he turned away with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

"Well, anyway," he said to himself, "it is pretty sure to count on that the thing won't sink, even if I can't make it go, and if we run on a rock, we can both swim all right."

As he started up the path toward the hotel, he caught sight of Virginia coming toward him, and waited. The girl was smiling to herself, one of the teasing, mischievous smiles of the old days. On her arm was a light shawl.

"Ahoy, captain!" she called merrily, and saluted gravely.

"Hello, Vi!" he answered, unconsciously responding to her return to the old intimacy. "The cruiser is all ready—shall we put to sea?"

"Well, we will go to see, anyway," she laughed, and tripped to the end of the wharf.

"Oh, what a beauty!" she exclaimed, delighted by the trim lines of the little craft. "It certainly is fine, but how did you ever come to buy one, Ned?"

"Oh, I—well, I heard you say one day that you liked them, and so, of course—that is, I knew they must be nice," he stammered.

She gave him a quick look from beneath her long lashes, but made no reply. He had pulled the boat in close, and she stepped upon the little forward deck.

"Come on, ancient mariner," she commanded, and he followed her aboard. He cast off the line, and, following the agent's instructions, gave the fly-wheel of the engine a quick turn, to be rewarded by hearing the quick, strong "pop-pop" of regular explosions. Virginia had possessed herself of the wheel, and headed the boat up the lake.

They were rather silent as the boat sped on through the clear water, winding in and out among the tiny green islands. The girl seemed intent upon her steering, and he was content to watch her face, about which little tendrils of brown curls were blowing. The bracing air had brought a bright color into her cheeks, and her eyes were sparkling.

"We can go as far as the old fisherman's camp," she presently said; "that is 18 miles, and then get back in time for dinner."

"You are steering dear," he said, and was appalled at his daring. If she noticed the term he used, she gave no sign, and he hoped devoutly that she had not.

Presently she brought the boat around with a sweep, and pointed to a quipped hut upon the island.

"That's the old camp," she said, "and it's your turn to steer now. I am going to sit back in the stern for awhile."

He obediently took his place at the little wheel in the forward end of the boat, it never once occurring to him that she could be steered from any point by means of the rudder-lines that ran along the combing.

Then they sailed straight into the setting sun now, and it required a careful watch to avoid the rocks which came just to the surface of the water, so that he did not dare often to turn his head. A quiet fury at himself was taking possession of his mind. Why had he not, when he had the opportunity, declared his love for the girl? Of course he would have been rejected, but anything would be preferable to his present state. And yet, perhaps, who could tell? Was she not always kind to him—did she not seem to enjoy his company?

His reflections were suddenly interrupted by a peculiar jerking check in the speed of the boat; the next instant it was very evident that something had gone wrong, for the engine coughed and spluttered, and finally seemed to jam. Their only headway was the rapidly failing momentum already acquired.

Ned left the wheel, and examined the engine carefully. So far as his limited knowledge could discover there was nothing wrong. The spark was clear and strong, and the tank was half full of gasoline.

"Now what do you think of that?" he muttered hopelessly, and sat down, starting at the motor.

"I think," Virginia answered, "practically, seating herself opposite, 'that we are going to miss our dinner.'"

"There is a plenty to eat in that locker," he said encouragingly. "If the thing don't take a notion to go pretty soon, so that we turn up by seven, Jack Phillips will come looking for us with his boat. He said I was a fool to take a girl out in a motor boat without knowing anything about it."

"But you didn't take me—I just came along," Virginia consoled. "It isn't your fault if the motor breaks down, is it? You tell Jack I say he's horrid."

Presently the gold began to fade from the western sky, and as the sun sank a cool breeze sprang up. Virginia, in her thin shirt waist, shivered. In a moment his coat was off, and he had wrapped it about her.

"No, no!" she protested, endeavoring to free herself from the enveloping folds, "I am not cold, really—and you will take cold."

"You be quiet," he commanded, and the girl obeyed, while a new light came into her eyes. Presently her slender form began to droop a little.

"Are you tired?" he said.

"Well, perhaps a little," she admitted. "I guess it was the tennis this morning."

He moved closer to her side, and slipped one arm about her.

"You can rest against my shoulder," he said, and drew her gently to him.

"But—but you are tired, too, I know," Virginia objected. He laughed lightly, and she could feel the muscles of his powerful arm swell. "You are very strong, are you not?" she said, admiringly, and nestled a bit closer.

Silver stars came out one by one, and there was no sound save the lapping of the wind-ripples against the boat. They seemed alone in a dream world, and he seemed hardly conscious of any reality but the warmth of the slender form in his arms and the sweet, faint perfume of her hair.

Gently he raised her chin, that he might look into her brown eyes, and then pressed his lips upon the ripe red ones that did not seek to avoid him.

How long it was he never knew, but presently the distant beat of a launch's motor forced itself upon his attention.

"That must be Jack," he said, and sighed.

Virginia sprang to her feet, and began to roll back the sleeves from a round, white arm.

"Light your side-lights, quick!" she commanded, and he hastened to obey. Soon a bright green and red was reflected in the water. When his task was completed he turned toward Virginia.

The girl was lying upon the after-deck, with her arm buried to the shoulder in the water. Presently she arose, and the ragged remains of a light shawl was in her hand.

"It—it was tangled in the propeller, dear," she whispered, and blushed a fiery red.

"You blessed angel!" he muttered, and again took her in his arms.

"I think the engine will go now," she said, and a minute later its strong, regular beats were sounding through the night.

Alumni Claim Governor.

Gov. Hughes is probably the most "alumni'd" executive that ever headed the state government. Attending the Cornell dinner the other night, he was hailed as a son of the Ithaca institution and only a week or so before the Brown alumni had claimed him for their own. But the governor if he has any desire to qualify further may drop in on the Colgate and even the Columbia alumni when they dine. He started his college career at Colgate, stayed there two years and then went to Brown. He studied law at Columbia and became a Cornell man by occupying a lecture chair there for two years.

"I saw something in the paper the other day that pleased me. I cut it out and took it home and read it to my wife. It was simple and direct—one of those fugitive little bits that are evolved by some sunny-minded philosopher."

"What was it?"

"It is better to have a smile and a kind word for breakfast than mutton chops."

"What did your wife think of it?"

"It seemed to impress her. All she gave me for breakfast the next morning was a smile, a kind word and a cup of coffee." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

UNEARTHED FRISCO GRAFT

William J. Burns "got the goods on 'Abe' Ruef" and other San Francisco boodlers where all others failed. When gang rule became so rotten in the Golden Gate city that the protests of decent citizens went unheeded; when graft, corruption and boodling was in vain exposed daily in the newspapers, the United States government was asked to send an officer and call an extraordinary grand jury. President Roosevelt sent Francis J. Heney with extraordinary powers. Heney wired: "I must have Burns in 'Frisco.'"

Burns went to Heney's aid. Courts of San Francisco blocked their every move for months. Ruef's hold may be imagined when it is remembered that when his arrest was finally ordered no officer of the police or sheriff's forces would take him. The court had to appoint a special "Elisor" to capture the "Boss" and keep him from the police.

Burns worked with Heney all through the Oregon land fraud cases, having been transferred from his post as chief of the secret service division of the United States treasury department to the authority of Secretary Hitchcock at that purpose.

"I will give you the best man I have," said Chief Wilkie to Hitchcock at that time.

"Do you think he is able to cope with this situation?" asked Hitchcock.

"He has never failed yet," was the laconic and impressive reply.

Burns has handed every important case in his field for the government in the past 18 years and has yet to record a failure. In 1899 he ran down the Philadelphia-Lancaster counterfeiters. These men, Taylor, Bredell, Jacobs and Kendig, bought a paper mill which made treasury note paper exactly like the government's. They put out thousands of $100 bills that were accepted at the United States subtreasuries. They robbed the government of $260,000 in counterfeit cigar stamps, which they used in their big cigar factory in Lancaster. It took Burns a year to get his evidence in this case, but he sent each of the counterfeiters to prison for 12 years. Burns dug up the counterfeit plates in a cemetery where Taylor's mother had buried them in her husband's grave.

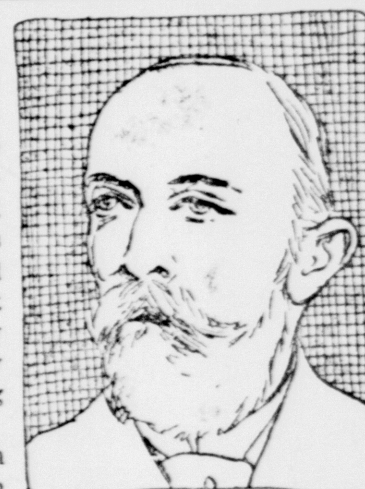

HAS NEW CONSUMPTION CURE

Emil von Behring, the celebrated German bacteriologist, who discovered the anti-diphtheria serum, has created a sensation in Europe by the announcement that he has a remedy for consumption. In an article just published in the Independent, Dr. von Behring describes his discovery. Holding that consumption, whether it appears early or late in life, is in most cases "the result of germs acquired in infancy," and namely by ingestion, it is his conviction that freedom from infection can be assured only by careful feeding and healthy surroundings in early childhood. Von Behring, however, has something to offer besides means of avoiding infection.

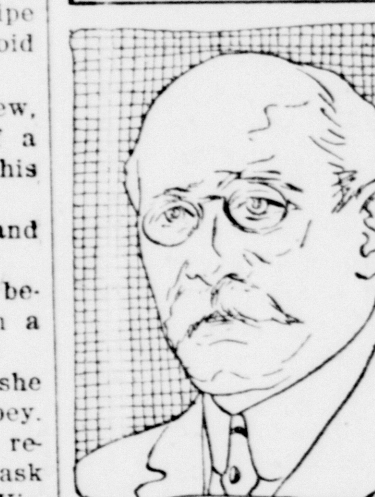

This is his "tulaselactin." Inoculation with this remedy, it is claimed, gives immunity from the disease. Whether those suffering from phthisis can be cured or improved has not yet been determined, but, judging by many experiments on animals, Prof. von Behring is persuaded that in tulaselactin he has discovered a means of increasing the resistance of those who show a hypersensitiveness under the tuberculin test.

As a scientist and medical discoverer von Behring ranks with Pasteur and Koch. He lives on a large medical farm near Marburg; he is a professor in the University of Berlin and a personal friend of the kaiser, who has increased his salary in order to enable him to devote his time to tuberculosis researches on a large scale. On his farm of 400 acres, Prof. Behring has no less than 400 cows, as well as several hundred horses and other animals. The enterprise costs in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year.

When the learned medical societies have proclaimed the indisputable value of "tulaselactin" Prof. von Behring will receive the $4,800 a year income from the Prix Lacave offered by the French academy for the conqueror of tuberculosis. He will also receive the $2,000,000 set apart by a Brazilian millionaire for the same purpose.

SEES CALAMITY FOR RAILROADS

William Wilson Finley, who recently became president of the Southern railroad, is discouraged about the outlook for the big lines. The two-cent fare agitation in many states and regulation of rates by the federal authorities means ruin, he thinks.

"Legislation," he said in an interview, "intended to regulate railroads will prove to be an obstacle to their development, and will tend to make worse, instead of better, the conditions sought to be remedied."

He foresees a ruinous contest in which every state will enter into strife of greed and envy to see which can impose the heaviest penalties on the unfortunate corporations in an endeavor to secure the largest supply of cars and the best service.

William Wilson Finley has had the valuable experience of a training on roads operating under widely differing conditions. He has seen railroad service in the middle south, the southwest and the northwest, and has had the past ten years to apply the knowledge gained in other parts of the country to conditions on the Southern railway. Mr. Finley was born in Mississippi in 1853, and began railroad work when he was 20 years old as a stenographer on the New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern, now part of the Illinois Central. During the next ten years he worked his way up on different southern roads until he was appointed assistant general freight agent of the Texas & Pacific. In 1888 he was appointed general freight agent of the Fort Worth & Denver City and other roads comprising the "Panhandle Route," which has since been taken over by the Colorado & Southern. The next year he was made chairman of the Trans-Missouri Traffic association, and in 1890 was appointed chairman of the Western Passenger association. He spent the next three years as general traffic manager of the Great Northern, and then went to the Southern as third vice president, from which position he has risen to the post of president.

INVENTS NEW EXPLOSIVE

Hudson Maxim, the inventor of explosives, recently announced that he had perfected a new weapon which makes armor plate valueless. It is a safety detonating fuse that can pass through steel armor of any thickness and explode as far inside as the gunner wishes.

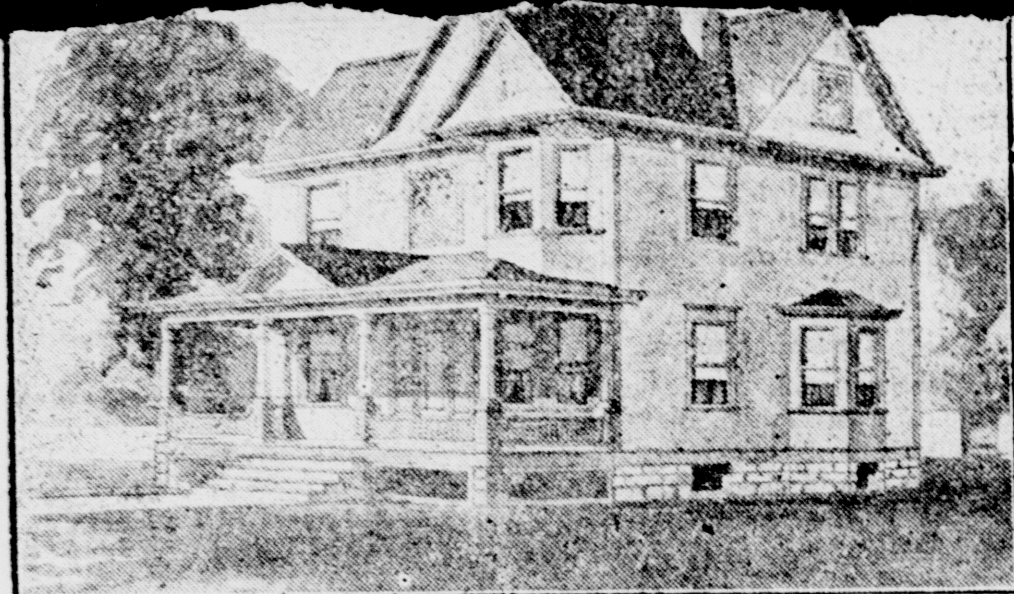

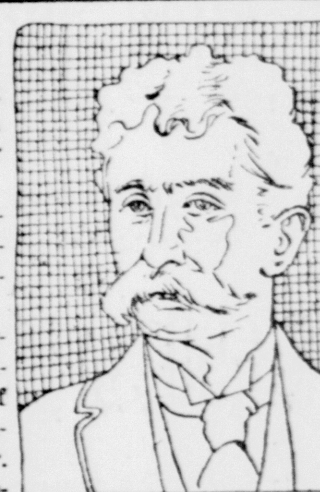

In addition he said he is now perfecting stability, a new smokeless powder, which is not dangerous to handle. Mr. Maxim, discussing the un-defended seaboard of the United States, said:

"The tremendous expense of modern warfare makes the unprepared nation the only inviting bait. Poor old China is a good sample of what may happen to a nation unprepared to maintain its own peace by being prepared for war. We are relatively as defenseless as China. Suppose some other nation should attempt to force our hands and call our bluff? Thanks to England, she does not call the bluff."

"When the Venezuelan trouble came we put our backs up and showed our teeth. And do you know what the real truth was? Our capacity, our national capacity, for the manufacture of smokeless powder at that time was one charge for one ten-inch gun each day."

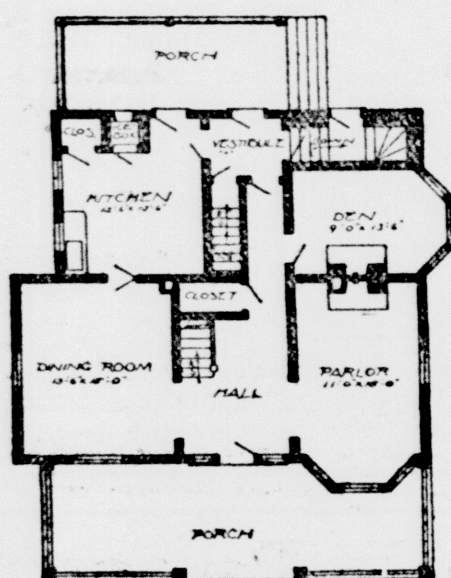

"Now as a matter of fact, on our Pacific coast we are absolutely defenseless. The Japanese have 750,000 trained veterans and we have 50,000 veterans—who spend their time in shoveling and waiting on the officers."

"It's true that we have got behind us the great American genius, but while that is getting to work the Japanese might capture the Pacific slope, land a quarter of a million troops, and occupy California. And California is rich enough in her own right to support the whole Japanese nation."

nail that passes through a strip of lath into the studding helps to make the house solid.

There is a combination front and back stair in this house that meets with approval where a person don't want to spare room enough for two separate stairways. Some folks are everlastingly dead set against combinations of all kinds, but they are all right in the proper place, and the center of this house seems to be the right place for this kind of a stairway. You take your choice when you go upstairs from the front hall or from the back vestibule, and your choice will probably depend on whether you have company in the front parlor and are garbed suitably according to your notions of propriety; but the back stair is handy anyway. A woman finds lots of use for such a convenience when she is doing the housework or on wash days. The grown-up boys also appreciate it when they come in quietly at unreasonable hours and don't care to wake up the old man. They appreciate father's opinion, all right enough, but they would rather not have it forcefully expressed between twelve and two o'clock in the morning.

There is an exceptionally good feature about this house that will bear mentioning in season and out of season, and that is the cellar. The in-season for a cellar lasts about 12 months during the year. I have never been able to discover when the out-of-season comes, unless it is when the boys have to clean the cellar in the spring time. A cellar would not be a desirable place to live in, but a first-class storeroom under the house that is properly kept, clean, well-aired and in good order is a source of satisfaction to the older members of the family.

Unappreciative Landlady.

Beethoven had many landings in the course of his young life, and many were the reasons on account of which he left them. One day, according to the academy, he had been playing the piano to an extent that was unusual, and the landlady's patience was entirely exhausted. "I can't stand that strumming any more," she said in effect to her daughter. "Go and tell him he should be built for about $2,500."

Primary Postponed Till June 8th LAW DEMANDS IT.

Oklahoma City April 20 — Convinced that it is impossible for a legal primary to be called for May 23, under the Oklahoma primary law because of the inability to give the required 30 days notice, the Democratic state executive committee, yesterday decided to postpone the date of the state primaries until June 8.

The unanimous sentiment of the members of the committee was that the primary should be held on May 23, if there was any way in which such a primary election could be legally held under the recent decision of Judge Buford, knocking out the supreme election board as created by an ordinance of the constitutional convention.

The decision of Judge Buford declares that under the enabling act the election must in all matters conform as near as possible to the election laws of the territory of Oklahoma.

Under the election ordinance as adopted by the constitutional convention, there would still have been ample time to publish the notice of the primary and it was under this law that the state committee at Tulsa contemplated calling the primary. Since the provision establishing the supreme election board has been invalid and it is agreed that the election laws of Oklahoma must apply it has been found necessary to secure more time in order that the law may be complied with.

Another feature of the Oklahoma law that influenced the decision for postponing the primary is the one requiring that all persons who vote in the primary in cities of the first class shall have registered one month preceding the primary election.

Under this provision were the election held May 23 many of the Democrats of the Indian Territory cities would be deprived of any voice in the choice of their party candidate.

LAST DAY OF CONSTITUTION MAKER'S DELIBERATIONS

Guthrie Okla. April 19 — Altogether the delegates today signed seven copies of constitution including the engrossed parchment and six typewritten copies. This did not include the county boundary section which will be signed by President Murray and Secretary Young only, following the completion of its transcribing. The parchment for this was shipped from New York yesterday.

The convention adjourned at 5 o'clock this afternoon as it will be impossible to get the entire election ordinance from the printer in time to complete the work tonight and final adjournment will be taken tomorrow morning.

The final vote on the constitution as interlined, changed and added to during the last week was 85 ayes, no nays and 27 absent. Delegate Cloud of Wellston the only republican present, voted for the constitution on final passage. Thus it received every vote cast. The signing was completed at 4:16 o'clock when Secretary Charles Wilson, of Oklahoma, attached the Oklahoma seal.

ADA SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CLASS PROGRAM

The Grade Exercises held yesterday by the Ada public schools were evidently enjoyed and appreciated to a very great extent, judging from the large attendance at the exercises when the program was repeated at night at the old M. E. Church building.

As advertised the program was given in the afternoon and again at night and at each time large crowds were in attendance many people being turned away for lack of room. There was some talk of repeating the program again tonight, but this was later abandoned.

Each room in the city schools furnished some exercise, and included 175 participants in all. The program was nicely gotten up and each number was much enjoyed. Following is the program.

ROY L. OWEN

FURMAN AT ARDMORE
Judge Furman... Thursday... press we observe... Here is a notable portion of his utterances as given in the press. 'He said he had no personal agent to work up enthusiasm for him and desired to be chosen to represent them in the U. S. senate solely upon his merits alone. He defined the duties of good citizens in the formation of laws and said that a government was no better than its citizens; he said that when a man was elected to office by the sheer force of money that the office belonged to him and he could and would use it to further his own selfish ends.'

THE disgruntled parishioners of a tenacious pastor under in Pennsylvania put some dynamite under the parsonage in the effort to jar him loose. This is the most heroic remedy on record for a holding on preacher.

A Scholar, "Statesman and Gentleman"
By DR. FRANCIS B. FITE

Robert L. Owen of Muskogee, Indian Territory is a Virginian by birth, of Scotch Irish ancestry and partly of Cherokee blood. Mr. Owen is a man who does things. He has recovered nearly twenty million dollars in values for his clients in the last sixteen years recovering about three million dollars for the Choctaws and Chickasaws and near six million dollars for the eastern and western Cherokees.

He took the degree of Master of Arts at Washington and Lee University under General Lee taking a six year course in three years the gold medal as best debater and the president a scholarship as the most diligent student and delivered the valedictory in 1877. He belongs to the old settlers of Indian Territory, his mother having been born at Webbers Falls Indian Territory, in 1831 and he has lived in Indian Territory nearly 30 years.

He has served the Democracy as editor or as organizer as member of the congressional campaign committee and of the Democratic national committee, and was vice-chairman of the Democratic campaign committee in 1906. As a lawyer he has won distinction in the supreme court of the United States. He is thoroughly familiar with regard to the degree of Master of Arts at Washington and Lee University under General Lee taking a six year course in three years the gold medal as best debater and the president a scholarship as the most diligent student and delivered the valedictory in 1877.

PRESCRIPTION TO CLEAN THE BLOOD
Anyone can easily mix the following prescription at home, which is said to be splendid because of its peculiarly beneficial action upon the kidneys, which are made to properly filter and strain from the blood the impurities, acids and poisons. Get the ingredients from any good pharmacy and mix them by shaking well in a bottle. Fluid Extract Dahdehon, one-half ounce, Compound Kargon, one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. Drink plenty of good water. Those whose veins are filled with sour acids and Rheumatic poison, who require a good blood cleanser and system tonic, or if the kidneys are weak and clogged up, should prepare this mixture and take as directed for a few days and note results.

hit of all class and people of Indian blood and no man in Indian Territory more thoroughly equipped than he was in Washington, where he spent six winters in practicing before the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government where he has been a legislator in which O. H. in this way. His argument in the Eastern Cherokee case, four years before the court of claims was pronounced by Chief Justice Taft. Not for forty years a justice of the court the first argument in his opinion ever delivered in that court. Mr. Owen has handled cattle on a large scale for many years and has now one of the finest herds of Hereford cattle in the state, which he has handled farming operations on a large scale and for some years has been engaged in the development of English blue grass for cattle raising, having the largest field of blue grass in Oklahoma.

Mr. Owen is an Iroquoian a life member of the I. O. O. F. a thirty second degree Mason a member of the Shrine. There is no man in the state who is more charitable more affable more disinterested being absolutely just and kind to other men. He has been at all times a champion of the rights of the common people and was an earnest advocate in establishing the Initiative and Referendum and has been the most conspicuous advocate in demanding the removal of restrictions on the sale and lease of lands in Indian Territory. Mr. Owen has offered his service to the state at the instance and demand of friends throughout the state who believe that he is qualified in a very extraordinary manner to serve the state in Washington and that he would do the state the greatest credit in the senate of the United States.

If chosen by the state he would enter the senate thoroughly equipped for immediate service and would not have to spend two years or more in learning how to accomplish things there. While Mr. Owen is a plain practical business man, at the same time he is regarded as one of the most convincing speakers in the state. A man who does not indulge in oratory but who has strong convictions and demonstrates the reason for his opinions with vigor and with great force. Indian Territory is indebted to him for much legislation of great value. The establishment of the national banking system the establishment of the United States court in Indian Territory full citizenship to all Indians, and many other services of importance. The fact that he is connected with the Indians of Indian Territory by blood will strengthen the Democratic party in nominating him for the senate, because nearly the whole of the lands of Indian Territory are owned by people of Indian blood or Indian sympathy.

OVERDRAFTS
It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will never have a bank account.

Floyd for Commissioner.

Subject to the action of the Democratic primary, C. W. Floyd, who lives 11-2 miles north of Ada, announces for county commissioner from the western district, the one which includes the northwest portion of Pontotoc county.

Though born in Arkansas, he came to the Territory while yet in his teens. For thirteen years he has lived in what is now Pontotoc county. He knows its people, its resources, its conditions, its needs. With the exception of two or three years merchandising at Allen, he has lived and labored all his life on the farm.

Notwithstanding Mr. Floyd is but 30 years old he has a grasp of business principles and public affairs worthy of a man of many more years. He has clearly demonstrated his zeal for the public weal by his untiring work in the past for good roads in this section. He is a sort of citizen who does not content himself with merely endorsing good movements; he labors for them.

Courting the closest scrutiny of his standing and his qualifications, Mr. Floyd announces the following terse and timely platform:

"I stand for good schools and good roads. I am in favor of rigid economy in the administration of public affairs. I will contend for the lowest rate of taxation which will meet the public necessities."

He would make a county commissioner the people could depend upon. An intemperate citizen, his sympathies would lead him to respect and harmonize the rights of the red man and the white man.

A. C. CRUCE HERE.

Supports His Brother for Candidacy for Governor.

A. C. Cruce, of Ardmore, made a lengthy speech at the U. S. court room this afternoon in support of the candidacy of his brother, Lee Cruce, for governor.

A good crowd of voters was in attendance and listened to a strong argument. He dealt at length on Haskell's relations to the constitution, and upon an alleged slander, by C. N. Haskell, of his brother, Lee Cruce, of Ardmore. He put up a good argument for the south end man and undoubtedly made some votes for his candidate.

Right along with Henry M. Furman, within all the Chickasaw country, the Hon. A. C. Cruce is probably the most popular man among all the people, and deservedly so; for his career in the territory has been one marked with innumerable kindness to his fellow man. He possesses great ability. He would have most admirably filled the governor's chair.

Pontotoc Election Officers.

Friday the constitutional convention completed a large portion of the new ordinance required to govern the first election. The county election commissioners named for Pontotoc are T. J. Chambliss, J. J. Burton and T. J. Denton; clerk, Sam McClure. Like appointments are made in all new counties. The election dates of the clerk correspond to those of county clerks in the old Oklahoma counties.

At Lonely School House.

Allan Blackburn was in from Blackburn's Gin Saturday. He reported an enjoyable political meeting there the night before. Tom D. McKeown and F. Z. Holley were in attendance from Ada and made speeches as did also A. C. Bray, candidate for register of deeds. Dr. Holley spoke at length on "Why I Quit Em," and his talk was highly entertaining, and to the point. Mr. Bray's talk was also much enjoyed.

ADA SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CLASS PROGRAM.

The Commencement Exercises will take place Tuesday night Dr. A. E. Turner, president of Trinity University of Wapakachie, Texas, will deliver the commencement address. Dr. Turner is a speaker of national reputation, and the school board is to be congratulated on getting him to make this address. He will also deliver the diplomas to the graduating class, and also to nineteen scholars who have finished the common school course. These who have finished the common school course can now enter the Freshman class of any university.

A very successful school year is just being closed in Ada. Credit is due Superintendent Perkins, all his faculty and the school board, as well as the students. Ada has a school to be proud of. All should attend the commencement exercises.

Sorosis Takes Vacation.

Sorosis held the last meeting of the session at the pleasant home of Mrs. R. F. King, Friday afternoon. The lesson being the closing scene of Hamlet, in mind, by let, was enjoyed by all. Mrs. R. F. King as leader brought out many interesting points and also reviewed different parts of the play.

The discussion—"How Do We Live?" was also very interesting. The Most, by Reading or by Travel, as did the schools.

At the close of the program a Rodamel in an appropriate presented Mrs. Sledge with the prize, for never having missed a meeting, for never being tardy, and faithful in all her work. The was a handsome cut glass olive

Mrs. Sledge expressed her appreciation to the club in a charming manner. The hostess then served delicious refreshments consisting of ice cream, strawberries and cake. Needless to say it was thoroughly enjoyed.

The study of the club for next week was out on the will be Macbeth, and while the meg and gave a very enjoy a vacation they will also look forward with pleasure to the time they will again take up their study. This began the Preaching at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow evening at 8:00 p. m. All members are most earnestly requested to be on hand as matters of great importance are to be considered. Sabbath school at 9:45 a. m. Junior Christian Endeavor at 4:00 p. m. No preaching in the morning because of union services at the Methodist church. C. E. Robertson, Pastor.

bless; secretary, J. E. Bills; assistant secretary, W. D. Hayes; corresponding secretary, M. C. Grigsby; treasurer, S. M. Torbett. I. M. King, Duke Stone and C. H. Reeves composed the committee appointed to draw up the constitution and by-laws. Tom Hope, W. H. Ebey, F. O. Harris and S. M. Torbett were appointed to attend to the purchase of furniture and fixtures for the club room.

The objects of the club is to build Ada to a 25,000 city, and for social purposes. Parlors will be nicely fitted up with reading rooms, card and domino tables, and pool and billiard tables. It was understood that these tables were not to be used on Sundays, and that the morals of the room would be kept up to a high standard.

The meeting adjourned to meet on the second Saturday in May.

The News predicts that this club will prosper. It has the right kind of men at its head to make it do so. It will also do the city a great amount of good, and will afford many pleasant hours for the members.

In Mayor's Court

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church will meet at the church Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and a full attendance of the members is most earnestly requested.

Wm. A. Radford Editor

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all matters pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On an average, the Editor and Manager of the American Home will answer all inquiries on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 104 Fifth Ave., New York 10, and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A squarely built house having four rooms downstairs and four bedrooms upstairs is shown in this plan. Generally speaking, there is economy in building a square house or a house that is nearly square on the ground. It is a sort of a square deal for the owner because the same amount of wall encloses more square feet of floor surface and more cubic feet of solid and the youngsters will grow to appreciate it in time.

There is another combination stairway in this house and that is the one that leads to the cellar. The entrance way from the kitchen and from outside doors meet on a common landing about the level of the ground. It is a good convenience in the summer and in the fall when using the cellar for storage for garden truck and it is just as mail that passes through a strip of lath into the studium helps to make the house solid.

There is a combination front and back stair in this house that meets with approval where a person doesn't want to spend much for two stairways. It is a sort of a square deal for the owner because the same amount of wall encloses more square feet of floor surface and more cubic feet of solid times a week. Some folks are shiftless enough to pile them up on the floor and let them stay there until spring, but this is a reprehensible habit which should be energetically discouraged. It is on the same principle of sweeping the dirt into a pile before it is scattered about the place.

There is a good front porch to this house and there is a back porch. Often think women take more comfort with a back porch in summer than any other part of the house. They can slip out there between working periods and enjoy a little fresh air without being obliged to change their working clothes. The value of a back porch is very much increased by having it screened in with vines. A good deal depends on which way the sun shines in but one vine or more may be used to advantage with almost any exposure.

In some localities wire mosquito netting is necessary to make the back porch habitable after sundown. The wire netting is a great help in keeping flies out of the kitchen all summer long. It doesn't pay to screen a porch in this way unless the porch is rightly planned. With this arrangement it is not necessary to go down to the ground through the porch. The cellarway comes in handy as an exit from the back part of the house when the porch is enclosed with wire netting. Of course a person would have a screen door to go out from the porch onto the ground when they wanted to but if this door is kept constantly swinging the flies will find their way in. There is a great deal in arrangement and this is one of the places to use a little skill in this direction.

The cost of a house like this depends so much on local prices of lumber and skilled labor that it is difficult to give an offhand estimate. It is a good sized house and one that gets away with quite a bit of material. Probably under favorable circumstances it should be built for about $2,600.

A HELPFUL TANGLE

BY EMMETT C. HALL

(Copyright by Daily Story Pub Co.)

Ned Hazard stood upon the little dock and surveyed the trim motor boat that floated jauntily upon the clear water of the lake. There was in his face an amusing mixture of admiration, proprietary pride and hesitancy. He was quite as familiar with the operation of a launch as with animals of the early glacial period and yet he had asked Virginia Moore to take a sail with him that very afternoon.

Of course it would have been a simple matter to have secured a man from the boat club but Ned Hazard was accustomed to do things himself, and the idea of two dreamy hours alone with Virginia was too enticing to be put aside. And any way had not the agent fully explained the workings of the motor to him?

Hazard was the happy product of two distinct sections and environments. A college man born in the east he had gone with the first rush to Alaska and had struck it rich. The three long silent years under the Northern lights had left their imprint, however. They had given a quiet self-reliance but also a remarkable diffidence with women and it was most marked in the company of Virginia. When he had gone away she had left her a mischievous laugh, a school girl and when he returned he had found a beautiful woman and had promptly fallen in love with her.

It had not been for the three silent years he would no doubt have used his suit with all the ardor he had put into football in his college days and quite as likely Virginia would have gently turned him down. As it was he loved her with a devotion the intensity of which caused him to depreciate himself in his own mind which so clouded his vision that he could not even that Virginia evinced a most decided preference for his company. At her hand trembled and her eyes shined when they met.

After his inspection of the launch he turned away with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

Well, anyway, he said to himself, it is pretty sure to count on that thing won't sink even if I can't make it go and if we run on a rock we can both swim all right.

As he started up the path toward the hotel he caught sight of Virginia coming toward him and waited. The girl was smiling to herself one of the frequent mischievous smiles of the old days. On her arm was a light shawl.

"Hello, captain," she called merrily and saluted gravely.

"Hello, Vi," he answered unconsciously responding to her return to the old intimacy. The cruiser is all ready, shall we get to sea?"

"Well, we will go to sea anyway," he laughed and tripped to the end of the wharf.

"Oh, what a beauty!" she exclaimed. "I like the trim lines of the little boat. It is really fine. But I would never come to buy one, do you?"

"Oh, I—well, I heard you say once that you liked them and so of course that is I knew they must be nice," he stammered.

She gave him a quick look from beneath her long lashes, but made no reply. He had pulled the boat in close and she stepped upon the little forward deck.

Came on ancient manner she commanded and he followed her. He cast off the line and followed the agent's instructions, gave the fly wheel of the engine a quick turn to be rewarded by hearing the quick strong pop-pop of regular explosions. Virginia had possessed herself of the wheel and headed the boat up the lake.

They were rather silent as the boat sped on through the clear water winding in and out among the tiny green islands. The girl seemed in a sort of reverie and he was content to watch her face about which little tendrils of brown curls were blowing. The bracing air had brought a bright color into her cheeks and her eyes were sparkling.

"We can go as far as the old fish camp," she presently said, "that is 15 miles and then get back in time for dinner."

"You are steering dear," he said and was appalled at his daring. If she noticed the term he used she gave no sign and he hoped devoutly that she had not.

Presently she brought the boat around with a sweep and pointed to a curved hut upon the island.

"That's the old camp," she said, "and it's your turn to steer now. I am going to sit back in the stern for while."

He obediently took his place at the little wheel in the forward end of the boat. It never once occurred to him that she could be steered from any point by means of the rudder lines that ran along the combing.

Then they sailed straight into the setting sun now, and it required a careful watch to avoid the rocks which came just to the surface of the water so that he did not dare often to turn his head. A quiet fury at him self was taking possession of his mind. "Why had he not when he had the opportunity, declared his love for the girl? Of course he would have been rejected, but anything would be preferable to his present state. And yet perhaps who could tell? Was she not always kind to him—did she not seem to enjoy his company?"

His reflections were suddenly interrupted by a peculiar jerking check in the speed of the boat the next instant it was very evident that something had gone wrong for the engine coughed and sputtered and finally seemed to jam. Their only headway was the rapidly falling momentum already acquired.

Ned left the wheel and examined the engine carefully. So far as his limited knowledge could discover there was nothing wrong. The spark was clear and strong and the tank was half full of gasoline.

Now what do you think of that? he muttered hopelessly and sat down, staring at the motor.

"I think Virginia answered practically seating herself opposite that we are going to miss our dinner."

There is a plenty to eat in that locker," he said encouragingly. If the thing don't take a notion to go pretty soon so that we turn up by seven Jack Phillips will come looking for us with his boat. He said I was a fool to take a girl out in a motor boat without knowing anything about it.

But you didn't take me—I just came along," Virginia consoled. "Isn't your fault if the motor is down is it?" You tell Jack I say so.

Presently the gold began to fade from the western sky and as the sun sank a cool breeze sprang up. Virginia in her thin shirt waist shivered. In a moment his coat was off and he had wrapped it about her.

"No, no!" she protested endeavoring to free herself from the enveloping folds. "I am not cold really—and you will take cold."

"You be quiet," he commanded and the girl obeyed while a new light came into her eyes. Presently her slender form began to droop a little. "Are you tired?" he said.

"Well, perhaps a little," she admitted. "I guess it was the turns this morning."

He moved closer to her side and slipped one arm about her.

"You can rest against my shoulder," he said and drew her gently to him. "But—don't you are tired too?"

"I am," Virginia objected. "He had been lightly and she could feel the muscles of his powerful arm swell. You are very strong—are you not?" she asked admiringly and nestled a bit closer.

Silver stars came out one by one and there was no sound save the lip-ping of the wind ripples against the boat. They seemed to be in a dream world and he was in a dazed condition of inactivity at the warmth of the slender form in his arms and the sweet faint perfume of her hair. "You are a beautiful girl," he thought and then pressed his lips upon the rippling ones that did not seek to avoid him.

How long it was he never knew but presently the distant beat of a launch's motor forced itself upon his attention.

"That must be Jack," he said and shivered.

Virginia sprang to her feet and began to pull back the sleeves from a red and white arm.

"Light your side lights, quick!" she commanded and he listened to obey. Soon a bright green and red was reflected in the water. When his task was complete he turned toward Virginia.

The girl was lying upon the after deck with her arm buried to the shoulder in the water. Presently she arose and the ragged remains of a light shawl was in her hand.

"It—it was tangled in the propeller," she whispered and blushed a fiery red.

"You blessed angel!" he muttered, and again took her in his arms.

"I think the engine will go now," she said and a minute later its strong regular beats were sounding through the night.

Alumni Claim Governor

Gov. Hughes is probably the most alumnified executive that ever headed the state government. Attending the Cornell dinner the other night he was hailed as a son of the Ithaca Institution and only a week or so before the Brown alumni had claimed him for their own. But the governor if he has any desire to qualify further may drop in on the Colgate and even the Columbia alumni when they dine. He started his college career at Colgate, stayed there two years and then went to Brown. He studied law at Columbia and became a Cornell man by occupying a lecture chair there for two years.

I saw something in the paper the other day that pleased me. I cut it out and took it home and read it to my wife. It was simple and direct—one of those fugitive little bits that are evolved by some sunny minded philosopher.

What was it? It is better to have a smile and a kind word for breakfast than mutton chops."

What did your wife think of it? "It seemed to impress her. All she gave me for breakfast the next morning was a smile, a kind word, and a cup of coffee."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

UNEARTHED FRISCO GRAFT

William J. Burns got the goods on 'Abe' Ruef and other San Francisco hoodlums where all others failed. When gang rule became so rotten in the Golden Gate city that the protests of decent citizens went unheeded, when graft, corruption and hoodling was in vain exposed daily in the newspapers, the United States government was asked to send an officer and call an extraordinary grand jury. President Roosevelt sent Francis J. Heney with extraordinary powers. Heney wired: "I must have Burns in Frisco."

Burns went to Heney's aid. Courts of San Francisco blocked their every move for months. Ruef's hold may be imagined when it is remembered that when his arrest was finally ordered no officer of the police or sheriff's forces would take him. The court had to appoint a special Elisor to capture the 'Boss' and keep him from the police. Burns worked with Heney all through the Oregon land fraud cases, having been transferred from his post as chief of the secret service division of the United States treasury department to the authority of Secretary Hitchcock at that purpose.

I will give you the best man I have," said Chief Wilkie to Hitchcock at that time.

Do you think he is able to cope with this situation?" asked Hitchcock.

"He has never failed yet," was the laconic and impressive reply. Burns has handled every important case in his field for the government. In the past 18 years and has yet to record a failure. In 1899 he ran down the Philadelphia Lancaster counterfeiters. These men Taylor, Brodell Jacobs and Kendig bought a paper mill which made treasury note paper exactly like the government's. They put out thousands of $100 bills that were accepted at the United States subtreasuries. They robbed the government of $250,000 in counterfeit cigar stamps which they used in their big cigar factory in Lancaster. It took Burns a year to get his evidence in this case, but he sent each of the counterfeiters to prison for 12 years. Burns dug up the counterfeit plates in a cemetery where Taylor's mother had buried them in her husband's grave.

HAS NEW CONSUMPTION CURE

Lmil von Behring the celebrated German bacteriologist who discovered the anti-diphtheria serum has created a sensation in Europe by the announcement that he has a remedy for consumption. In an article just published in the Independent Dr. von Behring describes his discovery. Holding that consumption whether it appears early or late in life is in most cases the result of germs acquired in infancy and namely by ingestion. It is his conviction that freedom from infection can be assured only by careful feeding in healthy surroundings in early childhood. Von Behring however has something to offer besides means of avoiding infection.

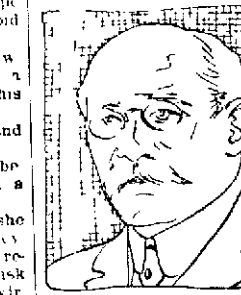

This is his tuberculin. Inoculation with this remedy it is claimed gives immunity from the disease. Whether those suffering from phthisis can be cured or improved has not yet been determined but judging by many experiments on animals, Prof. von Behring is persuaded that in tuberculin he has discovered a means of increasing the resistance of those who show a hypersensitiveness under the tuberculin test.

As a scientist and medical discoverer von Behring ranks with Pasteur and Koch. He lives on a large medical farm near Marburg. He is a professor in the University of Berlin and a personal friend of the Kaiser, who has increased his salary in order to enable him to devote his time to tuberculous researches on a large scale. On his farm of 400 acres Prof. Behring has no less than 400 cows as well as several hundred horses and other animals. The enterprise costs in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year.

When the learned medical discoverer will receive the $4,800 a year income from the Prix Lavoisier offered by the French academy for the conqueror of tuberculous. He will also receive the $2,000,000 set apart by a Brazilian monarch for the same purpose.

SEES CALAMITY FOR RAILROADS

William Wilson Finley, who recently became president of the Southern railroad is discouraged about the outlook for the big lines. The two-cent fare system in many states and regulation of rates by the federal authorities means ruin, he thinks.

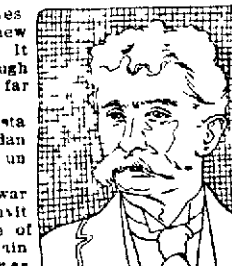

Legislation, he said in an interview, "intended to regulate railroads will prove to be an obstacle to their development and will tend to make worse instead of better the conditions sought to be remedied."

He foresees a ruinous contest in which every state will enter into strife of greed and envy to see which can impose the heaviest penalties on the unfortunate corporations in an endeavor to secure the largest supply of cars and the best service.

William Wilson Finley has had the valuable experience of a training on roads operating under widely differing conditions. He has seen railroad service in the middle south, the southwest and the northwest and has had the past ten years to apply the knowledge gained in other parts of the country to conditions on the Southern railway. Mr. Finley was born in Mississippi in 1853 and began railroad work when he was 20 years old as a stenographer on the New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern now part of the Illinois Central. During the next ten years he worked his way up on different southern roads until he was appointed assistant general freight agent of the Texas & Pacific. In 1885 he was appointed general freight agent of the Fort Worth & Denver City and other roads comprising the Panhandle Route which has since been taken over by the Colorado & Southern. The next year he was made chairman of the Trans-Missouri Traffic association and in 1890 was appointed chairman of the Western Passenger association. He spent the next three years as general traffic manager of the Great Northern and then went to the Southern as third vice president, from which position he has risen to the post of president.

INVENTS NEW EXPLOSIVE

Hudson Maxim the inventor of explosives recently announced that he had perfected a new weapon which makes armor plate valueless. It is a safety detonating fuse that can pass through steel armor of any thickness and explode as far inside as the gunner wishes.

In addition he said he is now perfecting a little new smokeless powder which is not dangerous to handle. Mr. Maxim discussing the un-defended seaboard of the United States said:

The tremendous expense of modern warfare makes the unprepared nation the only inviting bait. Poor old China is a good sample of what may happen to a nation unprepared to maintain its own peace by being prepared for war. We are relatively as defenseless as China. Suppose some other nation should attempt to force our hands and call our bluff? Thanks to England she does not call the bluff.

When the Venezuelan trouble came we put our backs up and showed our teeth. And do you know what the real truth was? Our capacity for national capacity, for the manufacture of smokeless powder at that time was one charge for one ten inch gun each day.

Now as a matter of fact, on our Pacific coast we are absolutely defenseless. The Japanese have 750,000 trained veterans and we have 50,000 veterans—who spend their time in shoveling and in waiting on the officers.

It's true that we have got behind us the great American genius but while that is getting to work the Japanese might capture the Pacific slope, land a quarter of a million troops and occupy California. And California is rich enough in her own right to support the whole Japanese nation.

Primary Postponed Till June 8th

LAW DEMANDS IT.

Oklahoma City, April 20.—Convinced that it is impossible for a legal primary to be called for May 23, under the Oklahoma primary law because of the inability to give the required 30 days notice, the Democratic state executive committee, yesterday decided to postpone the date of the state primaries until June 8.

The unanimous sentiment of the members of the committee was that the primary should be held on May 23, if there was any way in which such a primary election could be legally held under the recent decision of Judge Barford, knocking out the supreme election board as created by an ordinance of the constitutional convention.

The decision of Judge Barford declares that under the enabling act the election must in all matters conform as near as possible to the election laws of the territory of Oklahoma.

Under the election ordinance as adopted by the constitutional convention, there would still have been ample time to publish the notice of the primary and it was under this law that the state committee at Tulsa contemplated calling the primary. Since the provision establishing the supreme election board has been invalid and it is agreed that the election laws of Oklahoma must apply it has been found necessary to secure more time in order that the law may be complied with.

Another feature of the Oklahoma law that influenced the decision for postponing the primary is the one requiring that all persons who vote in the primary in cities of the first class shall have registered one month preceding the primary election.

Under this provision were the election held May 23 many of the Democrats of the Indian Territory cities would be deprived of any voice in the choice of their party candidate.

LAST DAY OF CONSTITUTION MAKER'S DELIBERATIONS

Guthrie, Okla., April 19.—Altogether the delegates today signed seven copies of constitution including the engrossed parchment and six typewritten copies. This did not include the county boundary section which will be signed by President Murray and Secretary Young only, following the completion of its transcribing. The parchment for this was shipped from New York yesterday.

The convention adjourned at 5 o'clock this afternoon as it will be impossible to get the entire election ordinance from the printer in time to complete the work tonight and final adjournment will be taken tomorrow morning.

The final vote on the constitution as interlined, changed and added to during the last week was 85 ayes, no nays and 27 absent. Delegate Cloud of Wellston the only republican present, voted for the constitution on final passage. Thus it received every vote cast. The signing was completed at 4:16 o'clock when Secretary Charles Falcon, of Oklahoma, attached the Oklahoma seal.

ADA SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CLASS PROGRAM

The Grade Exercises held yesterday by the Ada public schools were evidently enjoyed and appreciated to a very great extent, judging from the large attendance at the exercises when the program was repeated at night at the old M. E. Church building.

As advertised the program was given in the afternoon and again at night and at each time large crowds were in attendance. Many people being turned away for lack of room. There was some talk of repeating the program again tonight, but this was later abandoned. Each room in the city schools furnished some exercise, and included 175 participants in all. The program was nicely gotten up and each number was much enjoyed. Following is the program.

Floyd for Commissioner.

Subject to the action of the Democratic primary, C. W. Floyd, who lives 11-2 miles north of Ada, announces for county commissioner from the western district, the one which includes the northwest portion of Pontotoc county.

Though born in Arkansas, he came to the Territory while yet in his teens. For thirteen years he has lived in what is now Pontotoc county. He knows its people, its resources, its conditions, its needs. With the exception of two or three years merchandising at Allen, he has lived and labored all his life on the farm.

Notwithstanding Mr. Floyd is but 30 years old he has a grasp of business principles and public affairs worthy of a man of many more years. He has clearly demonstrated his zeal for the public weal by his untiring work in the past for good roads in this section. He is a sort of citizen who does not content himself with merely endorsing good movements; he labors for them.

Courting the closest scrutiny of his standing and his qualifications, Mr. Floyd announces the following terse and timely platform:

"I stand for good schools and good roads. I am in favor of rigid economy in the administration of public affairs. I will contend for the lowest rate of taxation which will meet the public necessities."

He would make a county commissioner the people could depend upon. An intermarried citizen, his sympathies would lead him to respect and harmonize the rights of the red man and the white man.

A. C. CRUCE HERE.

Supports His Brother for Candidacy for Governor.

A. C. Cruce, of Ardmore, made a lengthy speech at the U. S. court room this afternoon in support of the candidacy of his brother, Lee Cruce, for governor.

A good crowd of voters was in attendance and listened to a strong argument. He dealt at length on Haskell's relations to the constitution, and upon an alleged slander, by C. N. Haskell, of his brother, Lee Cruce, of Ardmore. He put up a good argument for the south end man and undoubtedly made some votes for his candidate.

Right along with Henry M. Furman, within all the Chickasaw country, the Hon. A. C. Cruce is probably the most popular man among all the people, and deservedly so; for his career in the territory has been one marked with innumerable kindness to his fellow man. He possesses great ability. He would have most admirably filled the governor's chair.

To Rent.

In the big rush this morning at Steed's store the first lady to gain entrance was Miss Mary Vogt who was awarded the fine pair of shoes. A son of Geo. Davidson was the first boy to get in and was given the money offered.

J. F. Sparks, from the Corner, was in Ada today on business.

Pontotoc Election Officers.

Friday the constitutional convention completed a large portion of the new ordinance required to govern the first election. The county election commissioners named for Pontotoc are T. J. Chambliss, J. J. Burton and T. J. Denton; clerk, Sam McClure. Like appointments are made in all new counties. The election dates of the clerk correspond to those of county clerks in the old Oklahoma counties.

At Lonsdale School House.

Allan Blackburn was in from Blackburn's Gin Saturday. He reported an enjoyable political meeting there the night before. Tom D. McKeown and F. Z. Holley were in attendance from Ada and made speeches as did also A. C. Bray, candidate for registrar of deeds. Dr. Holley spoke at length on "Why I Quit Em," and his talk was highly entertaining, and to the point. Mr. Bray's talk was also much enjoyed.

ADA SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT AND CLASS PROGRAM.

The Commencement Exercises will take place Tuesday night Dr. A. E. Turner, president of Trinity University of Waco, Texas, will deliver the commencement address. Dr. Turner is a speaker of national reputation, and the school board is to be congratulated on getting him to make this address. He will also deliver the diplomas to the graduating class, and also to nineteen scholars who have finished the common school course. These who have finished the common school course can now enter the Freshman class of any university.

A very successful school year is just being closed in Ada. Credit is due Superintendent Perkins, all his faculty and the school board, as well as the students. Ada has a school to be proud of. All should attend the commencement exercises.

Sorosis Takes Vacation.

Sorosis held the last meeting of the session at the pleasant home of Mrs. R. F. King, Friday afternoon. The lesson being the closing scene of Hamlet in mind, by dy let, was enjoyed by all. Mrs. R. F. King as leader brought out many interesting points and also reviewed different parts of the play.

The discussion—"How Do We Learn in a body, the Most, by Reading or by Travel?" was also very interesting.

ENDS VOTERS

The objects of the club is to build Ada to a 25,000 city, and for social purposes. Parlors will be nicely fitted up with reading rooms, card and domino tables, and pool and billiard tables. It was understood that these tables were not to be used on Sundays, and that the morals of the room would be kept up to a high standard.

The meeting adjourned to meet on the second Saturday in May. The News predicts that this club will prosper. It has the right kind of men at its head to make it do so. It will also do the city a great amount of good, and will afford many pleasant hours for the members.

In Mayor's Court

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church will meet at the church Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and a full attendance of the members is most earnestly requested.
